The Pennsylvania papers are agitating the question of a constitutional convention. The present constitution, they amert, is not sufficiently restrictive of legislative abuse. Corruption and disregard of the interests of the people are complained of. In the new constitution they would have a provision that the ayes and nays shall be taken and recorded on the final passage of any bill, and that a two-thirds vote shall be required to give effect to any bill appropriation money from the Treasury. The Legislature Pennsylvania seems to be a sadty demoralibody, but whether this is due to vices in t constitution of the State or in the constitution of the members, is not clearly determined. The report made to the House by the Postmarter General shows that during the Last Congressional vacation, covering the months of August, September, October and November, he made 1644 removals of postmasters, of which 1281 were for political reasons. The recapitulation by States shows that in Ohio 127 removals were made, 95 being for political reasons; in Ittinois 190 removals, 100 being for political reasons; in Indiana 143 removals, 128 for political rearons; in Michigan ITI removals, U4 for political reasons; in Wisconsin 65 removals, 58 for political reasons; in Iowa 61 removals 53 for 2 for political reasons; in Missouri, 42 removals, 42 for political reasons; in Kentucky, 20 removals for plitical reasons, etc., etc.

THE RADICAL CONVENTION.

A summary of the proceedings of this body will be found in another column Governor Brownlow was re-nominated and accepted the candidacy in a brief and characteristic speech. The most noticeable feature of his remarks was his advo eacy of the "loyal" compensation bill lately defeated in the Senate, and the expression of his determination to make it an issue before the people, in the event that the present Legislature did not make it a law.

Gen Thomas was recommended as the schoice of the Radicals of Tennessee for the next Presidency A platform of resolutions was reported by a committee and adopted.

The interludes to the main programms were a quantity of motions and resolutions upon varioussubjects, and speeches by the choice spirits Those interested can find further information by reading what our reporters have given.

WE presume that the delegates to the Radical Convention were appointed be fore the "colored element" was made a part of the political body, and, therefore, no colored man had a right upon the floor of the hall in that capacity. But was it not courtesy to admit them to the the 24th inst we became aware of the noprivilege of the hall and the right to com; tion of our countrymen in America in the mingle and confer? He characterized the pendent action, as the only course now bebill as a measure which hald its hands on litting brave and henorable men, seduthe throat of the Rebel governments, and lously excheming for the future all unnetook the very breath out of them, and cessary exposure of our plans by public which pointed the bayoner at the heart of displays of our patriotism.

amendment, that it contained the princi of universal amnesty, he depied that, and said there was not a line in it which justi-fied the assertion. He advocated this bill , because it imposed duties on the Preslent of the United States, and he thought that perhaps some impeachment hunters would have a chance of impeaching him if he did not perform these duties. At least they would have a chance of finding a new and plain and definite cause for impeach ment, and could go forward to that work.

AN ENGRMITY. Mr. Sherman, a Sepator of Ohio, and a Radical whose party fealty is unimseachable, was the chairman of the select ommittee of the caucus of Senators elonging to that party, to whom was eferred the various propositions relating reconstruction, out of which was natched the measure which finally passed both Houses of Congress. It is to be esumed that he understood the import of the bill, and that his interpretation of its text is the true one. In the final de bate in the Senate, he made a brief speech in reply to Mr. Sumner, of Massachusetts, who objected to it because it lid not provide for the disfranchisement of "Rebels." He said we must not seek put the white men of the South under the control of their late slaves-that no ommunity, no Legislature, no convention lemanded it-he boldly announced that no American Congress would be guilty of Louis from July Zith until Nov. 3th 1866. The such an enormity. We give, he said, the egro the ballot, the school, the protection

The majorities in the two Houses that assed the bill in question clearly unlerstood this to be the meaning of the nw. Some of them, doubtless, would have preferred the disfranchising feature; but the bill, according to Mr. Sherman, does not contain it. That Senator did himself credit by his outspoken opposition to it; but he erred when he stated that no Legislature would favor the political domination of the "late slaves over the white men of the South-the enormity" which he declared that no longress would committ. The Tennessee egislature, in the furious passion of Southern loyally," and inspired by lust of office and power, has imposed that enormity" upon the white men of this tate; and their wiseners glory in the hame of the act. No Tennessean that eserves the name, can feel otherwise than humiliated at the disgrace brought upon the State by this needless selfpolitical reasons; in Minnesota 16 removals, 10 | abasement of the superserviceable "loyfor political reasons; in Nebraska 17 removals, alists" who make her laws. #### by their party friends in Congress SOUTHERN GOVERNOR TO THE FREEDMEN.

Gov. Orr of South Carolina in compa ny with Gen. Scott, Freedmen's Bureau meeting at Danville on the 20th inst. and de- Commissioner of that State addressed a large assembly of the colored people in Charleston a few days since. The Governor's remarks were kindly and whole some. He advised them to eschew polities and to labor to make the most of the civil the Fenian Brotherhood of the State of New rights which the governments, both State and Federal, had granted them. He frankly told them that the conferment of the suffrage upon their class indiscrimi nately would not be a boon to them, or a service to the country. He also said that public sentiment in the South was becoming prepared to admit them to qualified suffrage; but that their duty sister, speaking of her in tender terms, and said themselves was to labor and to wait. He cited the following historical illustration, warden told him that it was his duty to keep him as bearing upon the attitude they held to

The Revolutionary war closed in 1783. n 1808, some twenty-five years after, and not until then, was the constitution of South Carolina altered so as to allow even all white men to vote. Nobody, was allowed to vote, not even a white man, from 1703 to 1808, unless he was the owner of fifty acres of land or more. Why was it that soldiers who fought through the Revolationary war, who aided in achieving the independence their country, were excluded from the ballot-box? Simply because the wise men of that day, the legislators themselves, knew the importance of casting a vote for legislators to make laws. They knew the education of these men had been neglected, and they waited until a new generation grew up and had some advantages of education before even the white race was permitted to vote.

DUBLIN, Jan. 28, 1867 .- To All to Whom May Concern: In the present momentous crisis of Irish nationality, when in the eyes of the world the question of Ireland's existence or total extinction as an independent nation seems trembling in the balance, we, the representatives of the Republican party of Ireland, deem it our duty to make known to all true sympathizers with our down-trodden race and oppressed nationality, that we have takes our final stand on the high vantage ground of self-reliance; that, taught by years of bitter experience, we no longer base our hopes of success upon the co-operation of our countrymen in America; and that we repudiate, once and forever, the degrading doctrine that Irish liberty and Irish rights are not to be without assistance from foreign and external sources.
